

Atlântica Foods

Market News

Number 019 - January / 2010

Bimonthly Newsletter

Mango: quality of life!

Mango is considered a powerful source of vitamins A, B, C, has a high nutritional value and also a big therapeutic potential, being very appreciated locally since the Brazilian Colonial period. Consumed in-natura, in juices or yogurt, other benefits are also clear, like: high power of oxidation, reducing the risk of infections, and also stimulating the cicatrization.

All these characteristics make the mango very important for our nutriment!

In face of these excellent benefits, we would like to invite you to double check your needs of mango puree/concentrate, once the Brazilian mango crop is small and short this year, and the Tommy Atkins' is over – we are now negotiating its final availability.

Come to us, and let us work on your needs, against time!

NOTES

The following crops are coming:

Grape harvest in Brazil

Scheduled to begin in the second half of January, 2010;

Peach harvest in Argentina and Chile

Scheduled to begin in the second half of January, 2010;

Passion Fruit in Ecuador

Expected to start strongly during March, 2010, but we can already offer some product for prompt shipment;

Pink Guava harvest in Brazil

High production scheduled to start now, taking place during February, March and April.

Please contact our sales department, so we can send you our best offers for contracts during 2010.

NEW DESTINATION: Cartagena

Since last December, we are now shipping to Colombia!

Events

From February 21 to 24, the Gulfood Fair in Dubai, Arab Emirates, happens. We will be glad to welcome you at our booth F4-2 Hall 4 (Food & Drink). Come visit us!

■ 17th Encafé - Nov/09

The new format of the event, which this year featured negotiating tables, enabled us to be closer to our customers, reaffirming our goal to grow further in 2010 firmly strengthened Atlântica Foods' presence in the Brazilian market.

Thanks everyone who visited us during the event and we are interested in accommodating our entire line of machinery and packaging to your needs.

Register to receive the Newsletter by clicking "Contact"

Access previous editions in the menu "Newsletter"

Learn more about Atlântica Foods