FCOJ new season

2015 Brazilian season has just started and, as per official sources' forecast, it will be at 278 million boxes to supply fresh market and processing industry, for both FCOJ and NFC and this estimative is really below than previously expected.

In Florida, situation as per latest USDA's release, the crop will be at 96.4 million boxes, it means, the smallest season since the last 50 years, remembering that in a not far past they were already responsible for over 300 million boxes.

So, the reduced production forecast from the two main orange juice producing countries combined with current worldwide's stock levels indicate that there will not be enough stock to balance worldwide supply and demand. This mainly reinforces our view on the risk of fruit shortage in the future from supply reduction, and in other words, prices even firm.

Important to inform that right now the early fruit that is been processed is reaching ratios 13/14 and fields' specialists expect receiving mid-season fruit for crushing only by August; necessary to mention as well, the poor yield seen in the processing of the early fruits, once the quality of the fruit was certainly affected by at least 3 blossoms.

So, in order to better attend our clients' needs and work on safe position, talking about the new season deliveries, suggest you to plan your next purchasing and let us know by returning, allowing us to accommodate it with our production planning.

We would like to thank all the 122 companies who came to our booth in Fispal Tecnologia fair in São Paulo, Brazil. It was a pleasure to have received all of you! We remain at your disposal to fulfill your needs of food raw materials.
